SITE IDENTIFICATION STUDY

INTRODUCTION

Prior to 1971, municipalities, industries and in some cases individuals developed their own programs and facilities for waste management and disposal.

With no formal provincial regulation or control, the only authority exercised was on the municipal level. Economics, availability of suitable sites and ease of disposal were the prime factors in locating and operating disposal facilities. Environmental considerations were not of foremost concern.

It became clear that a coordinated approach was necessary. Therefore, the Ontario Government passed controlling legislation first with the Waste Management Act, 1970, then with The Environmental Protection Act, 1971. In 1972, the Ministry of the Environment embarked upon a continuing program of recording, certifying and improving or closing existing sites. Refer to Table I for a summary of waste disposal sites identified in Ontario.

To test whether or not waste disposal sites have contaminated ground water, we have examined laboratory tests upon well water samples, collected and analyzed from across the Province for the information and safety of the consumer. Except in isolated cases, it is clear that well water has not been affected by the presence of waste disposal sites.

To aid in identifying potential problems, investigations were commissioned in the summer of 1979 to locate waste disposal sites that had been used and closed prior to 1971, that is prior to the commencement of the Ministry of the Environment's continuing program of certification and recording. Additional information was also sought on abandoned sites that had become known to the Ministry over a period of years but that were never formally certified as they had been closed before certificates were issued. This additional information was necessary in order to categorize the sites for scheduling of potential problem identification studies.

Three contractors, York, Laurentian, and Lakehead Universities, were hired to carry out this inventory in accordance with the Terms of Reference contained in Appendix I. Their task was to define the locations of disposal sites that had existed prior to 1971 and that may be lost due to lack of records. This data together with the investigators' impressions was to be gathered from whatever source was available. Hearsay and memory, with all their uncertainties, necessarily had to play a large role in collecting data. Municipal records were often too skimpy to provide reliable leads which would have been welcomed, and half-forgotten memories served in their stead.

A form was designed (See Appendix II) to identify, where possible, types of wastes deposited, life-span of site, past owners, amount of waste, etc., and any developments on or adjacent to the site. This information forms the basis for establishing priorities in conducting further field investigations into problem identification.

For example, if development has occurred on or near a disposal site, this is very persuasive in setting a higher priority. In the same manner, the types of wastes deposited in a site will determine an order of priority.

During the contractors' investigations, they were instructed to refer any sites to Ministry regional offices when field researchers reported any observations which the contractors felt warranted some immediate investigation by the Ministry. This included odors being detected and possible leachate damage. Appendix III lists the action taken by the regional offices in each case.

Also included in the listing are old sites known to the Ministry but not certified because of closure prior to 1971. In cases where these sites may have posed some concern, abatement measures were taken as part of routine activities.

Some areas were purposely omitted by the contractor based on Ministry direction. These included areas where sufficient studies had already been carried out, areas where records and current knowledge of hydrogeologic conditions and criteria provided sufficient data to conclude that problems were unlikely to occur, and areas where other agencies (e.g. large municipalities such as Metro Toronto) could more efficiently and knowledgeably carry out similar investigations.

During the study, some additional sites were included resulting from information received directly from the public and reported to the Ministry rather than the survey teams. This often occured as a result of publicity and fact sheets in which we sought help from the community.

A summary of the Ministry's present knowledge of disposal sites in Ontario is presented in the accompanying table, Table I, page 4 (a). The sites identified by or as a result of the study (Appendix IV), have been placed in order of priority into I, II, and III Categories. The first, Category I, represents those sites where, because of location, development, use of water resources, type of waste that may have been deposited, etc., some possibility of problems associated with leachate migration or methane gas production exists.

Appendix V lists the sites where information obtained by investigation of records or discussions with local sources suggest that some material such as chemical waste, may have been disposed of at a site that was used predominantly for municipal waste. Even if the degree of confidence in the information is not high and even if no problems have been apparent over the past years, all of these sites are included in the Category I rating and will be studied accordingly.

The field investigations will be carried out at Category I sites first. Experience and knowledge gained will be used to direct future activities regarding the remaining sites.

With respect to the on-site waste facilities owned and operated by industries, it was considered that due to the complexity of many of the processes and the fact that the Ministry's regional staff were already heavily involved, such facilities could not be adequately dealt with as part of the universities' study. A separate listing of these sites is given in Appendix VI. On-going control and monitoring procedures have been established where potential for pollution may exist. However, even at those sites where no problems have been identified, confirmatory field investigations will be carried out.

It should be expected that the consolidation of results from the three contractors' reports will vary from the numerical total of sites documented for the following reasons:

- In certain areas, the Ministry had already carried out field studies to locate and identify old historic sites. As a result, the contractor has been instructed to omit these from his investigations. The sites so identified by the Ministry have been added to those documented by the contractor.

- During and after the term of the study, people contacted the Ministry directly with information on additional former disposal sites that were not discovered by the contractor. These direct contacts were prompted by publicity given to the study and the contractor's efforts at the local level to inform the public and the media. These have been added.

- In specific cases, the contractor was requested to visit certified sites in order to obtain additional information for existing Ministry files. These certified sites have been so noted in the consolidated report.

FUTURE ACTIVITIES

All these sites plus the certified sites presently on Ministry files will be entered into a specially designed computer program in order to facilitate input and retrieval of information. This will provide a valuable tool in providing information relative to the requirements set out by Section 46 of The Environmental Protection Act:

Section 46

"No use shall be made of land or land covered by water which has been used for the disposal of waste within a period of twenty-five years from the year in which such land ceased to be so used unless the approval of the Minister for the proposed use has been given. 1971 c86 s46"

Data gathered over the years indicate the 25 year period may not be sufficient in many cases to avoid hazard to structures placed on or near disposal areas. Other on-going studies will provide information needed to answer questions of the period that must elapse before building may proceed without risk. However, without knowing the locations of the old sites, it is clearly impossible to provide adequate safeguards and protection to those who may be unwittingly exposed to risk.

The Site Identification Study is the first major attempt to make an inventory of these sites, and it is only the first phase of a multi-phase program that will lead to the necessary field investigations. These in turn will be followed by necessary remedial programs and long-term monitoring.

In some cases, contractors discovered active sites that were unknown to the Ministry despite continuing efforts by staff to identify all such locations. In every case, appropriate action is being undertaken either to close such facilities properly or to bring them under control through the certification process and a program of upgrading to meet existing requirements.

For those who wish to examine the original contractors' documentation, data forms are available at all regional offices and may be reviewed during office hours by arrangement with the Regional Director's office. Contractors' data sheets are also available at the Waste Management Branch office at 135 St. Clair Avenue West, 2nd Floor, Toronto. Arrangements to view the material may be made through the Waste Management Branch Director's office.

APPENDIX I

TERMS OF REFERENCE FOR
WASTE SITE IDENTIFICATION STUDY
SITE IDENTIFICATION PROGRAM

PREAMBLE:

The Ministry is often faced with the problem of providing information relating to development on lands where, at some time in the past, there may have existed some waste disposal facility or activity. (Section 46, Part V, EPA). If the Ministry is to provide meaningful information, and identify potentially hazardous situations, it is essential to undertake a comprehensive survey of the Province to identify these areas. Existing records of the Ministry will be of little use in fulfilling this assignment.

Objective:

1. To identify and record the location, size, volume, dates of use, type of waste, etc., available on waste disposal sites, domestic, commercial, industrial, solid and liquid, public and private, prior to 1971 when present certification system and records were established and any additional sites where wastes may have been disposed of without the knowledge of the Ministry.

2. To ascertain the existence of "Rumoured" waste disposal sites, where no municipal or private records exist. This information will enable the Ministry to control development or activity on sites not previously documented.

Scope:

The program will involve a comprehensive survey conducted by the selected contractor soliciting information, with reference to the above objectives, from municipalities, the public, private industry and other agencies.

Area of the Survey:

The survey program will be conducted in the Ministry of the Environment, Central, West Central, Southwestern Region and Southeastern Regions. (See attached map)

Reporting of the Results:

1. The contractor is responsible to prepare a final report and submit ten copies to the Ministry of the Environment, Waste Management Branch no later than September 30, 1979.

2. The contractor will be required to provide a bi-weekly progress report on the survey and liase with appropriate region offices as directed by Ministry Project Manager.

3. The contractor will be required to attend bi-montly meetings with the Ministry's Project Manager to discuss the progress of the survey.

Financial Considerations:

The proposal for the program should include details on:

1. Work schedule and location
2. Number of employees
3. Compensation rate for each employee
4. Number of working days per employee
5. Transportation and support costs (estimated)
6. Overhead

The overall cost of the program shall not exceed the sum of $69,000.00.
